White Sands International Film Festival

We Elicit Your Helpful Support!

Dear Friends, The 5th annual White Sands International Film Festival takes place April, 23-26, 2009. This year the WSIFF again focuses on its goal of bringing eminent filmmakers to share their insights with audiences and heighten their appreciation of the art of cinema. The Festival once more promises to attract numerous visitors from around the world. With a special focus on Latino and New Mexican filmmaking, the WSIFF screens both outstanding short and feature length documentaries and narratives from around the world. The WSIFF also hosts a very special high school competition. The WSIFF is devoted to involving teens in the cinematic arts through educational workshops and programming.

The White Sands International Film Festival began four years ago as small and unique non-profit organization to help promote Southern New Mexico and to encourage the film industry to take advantage of Southern New Mexico's breathtaking countryside. With the creation of New Mexico's new film incentive program, the film industry has had a 1.5 billion dollar increase in revenue throughout the state. Now in it's fifth year, the festival, has grown to include and offer a uniquely diverse program encompassing a wide range of cinema, panels, and workshops, hosted by well recognized and experienced industry professionals.
